WINCHESTER, Va., March 25. On Saturday, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the Rebels showed themselves a mile and a half from Winchester. Gen. Jackson had been informed, by inhabitants, that the town was deserted by the Union troops, and he advanced to retake it. Gen. Shields brought up his force and fired several prisoners. Shields' force slept on their arms, Saturday night. The General was slightly wounded at the first fire, but

Sunday morning, at sunrise, Jackson, being reinforced, renewed the attack, near Kearnstown, three mile distant. The enemy's force consisted of 500 of Ashby's cavalry, 5,000 infantry, 9 peices of artillery, with a reserve of 18 pieces. The fight was kept up till noon, when a charge a Committee to bury him with honor. made by the Ohio Infantry, 1st Michigan, and 1st Virginia cavalry on their right, drove them back half a mile, when the enemy got their guns in position again in a dense wood, flanked by infantry, and drove us back.
